THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE

To Meet in Convention at La Crosse To-Morrow.

A MEMBERSHIP OF 15,000 IN WISCONSIN CLAIMED.

President Butt Says an Effort Will Be Made to Organize a State Purchasing Agency and to Establish a State Newspaper Organ. About 300 Delegates Expected to Be Present — The Organization and Growth of the Alliance in Wisconsin.

The State Farmers' alliance will hold a convention at La Crosse, beginning on Tuesday and probably lasting two days. As yet the public knows comparatively little about the organization in Wisconsin, its extent and its plans, and the convention for this reason will be watched with some interest by men of both the old parties. The general belief has been that the alliance has not yet gained a very strong footing in this state, certainly not as a political factor, although notices have appeared from time to time of the organization of branches in various parts of the state. It is now said there are nearly 300 branches in Wisconcon with a membership of 15,000. The alliance has not as yet taken an active part in politics, and it remains to be seen what its efforts and influence in that field will be. At the La Crosse convention Col. Butt, president of the alliance, says an effort will be made to organize a purchasing agency for the state, and also to start an alliance newspaper for general circulation, to be the Wisconsin organ of the organization. It is supposed also that the convention will consider the Peoples' party platform, and definitely decide whether or not it will ally itself with the new party. There are some demands in the Cincinnati platform which level headed farmers are not likely to endorse, and the convention may develop some disagreements on this particular question.

The Wisconsin State alliance was organized at Baraboo in June, 1888, when N. E. Moody, of Viroqua, was elected president; William Toole, vice-president; R. May, lecturer, and S. R. Merrill, treasurer. There were in that year only nine alliances in the state, and the growth was not rapid or extensive. The next year, 1889, showed seventeen alliances, and the state convention was again held at Baraboo, C. M. Butt, of Viroqua, being elected president; William Toole, of Baraboo, vice-president; R. May, lecturer; N. E. Moody, secretary, and S. R. Merrill, treasurer. The next year showed more activity, and when the State alliance met again at Baraboo, in 1890, it was reported that there were sixty-eight alliances, represented in the convention by seventy-eight delegates, while the number of alliances in the state was given as ninety. C. W. Butt was elected president; William Toole, vice-president; N. E. Moody, secretary; A. J. Phillips, lecturer, and S. R. Merrill, treasurer. The alliances to this time were confined to the part of the state north and west of the Wisconsin river and extending to Lake Superior.

A glance at the list of officers during these several years shows little change in the management of the organization, and it is inferred from this fact that the active workers had not so far increased as to bring any new leaders to the front.

During the past year there has been a more rapid growth of the order and the number of alliances has jumped from ninety to 269, with a amembership which President Butt estimates at 15,000. He expects that the state convention which opens to-morrow at La Crosse will be attended by 250 to 300 delegates, a much larger representation than any previous convention. L. L. Polk, president of the Farmers' alliance and Industrial union, it is hoped, will be present and also Mr. Baker, who has been active in the Farmers' alliance work in Kansas. Both these gentlemen are well qualified to give the Wisconsin alliance leaders valuable political pointers, as well as information as to what the alliance has achieved in Kansas and other states.

Wisconsin Students at Annapolis.

The students of the first class of naval cadets has been made up by the officials of the Naval academy at Annapolis. Sixth on the list of the engineer's division comes the name of Cadet George H. Shepard, of Wisconsin. In the line division Horatio Gonzalo Gillmore, of Wisconsin, stands second, being "starred" for merit, having a standing of 85 per cent. or over. Tenth is Charles Kuenzle, of Wisconsin, "marked for credit" as being above 74. William Daniel Brotherton, another Wisconsin boy, stands thirteenth in the list. Cadets Brotherton and Kuenzle have been assigned to the Boston. All the graduate cadets must have two years' service and an examination at the close before receiving their commissions. Among the previous class which has just had its examination for commissions Nathan C. Turning, of Wisconsin, stands second, Robert Ernest Camey, 25th and Julius Prochazka 30th.

Three New Postoffices.

WAUPUN, June 7.—Three new postoffices served from the Waupun office will soon be in operation, all located in the thickly settled farming community west of the city. Bing, located six miles west, Stanford about twelve miles west, near Lake Emily, the summer resort, and Mackford, located about twelve miles northwest, the postmasters appointed being John Ramaker, J. M. Gilmore and Charles Shaw, respectively, Mr. Ramaker receiving his commission yesterday. They will probably be served by an extension of the present star service running to Alto, eight miles northwest, and as daily service has been ordered on this route after July 1, it will give this section of country a fine mail service, something which has long been needed.

Pleased With the Appointment.

BLACK RIVER FALLS, June 7.—The appointment of Hon. H. H. Price as a member of the World's fair commission from this state is received here with universal commendation and it is conceded that no better selection could have been made from this part of the state.

Flax Mills at Waupun.

WAUPUN, June 7.—The Waupun Flax Mills company, after investigation, reached a decision that the old plant of the Norwegian Plow company was not adapted to its use, and have consequently arranged for the purchase of five acres of land lying along Rock river west of the city, upon which it will erect suitable buildings during the summer in readiness for fall work. The flax upon which they expect to work the coming winter is in the ground, most of it up and looking nicely. The Hatcher creamery in this city, commenced business last week, and its prospects are bright for a large first season's business.

A Touching Remembrance.

Chippewa Herald: On Memorial day, after leaving the cemeteries, the procession marched over the hill to the grave of the late Rev. Father Goldsmith. The G. A. R. opened ranks and the little children passed through with their floral tributes and decorated the resting place of the soldier's friend, after which for a few moments the Catholic societies knelt about his grave in silent prayer. His grave was marked with a flag early in the morning, as he was an honorary member of James Comerford post, G. A. R. He was a man who held love of country above all else, and a firm and generous friend of the G. A. R. post of this city, always giving generously to all their efforts, and counting no honor so great as to officiate as their chaplain on Memorial day.

Small Fruits Not All Ruined.

Janesville Daily Gazette: Reports from all sections of Rock county contradict the reports sent in during the first two weeks in May regarding the injury to the fruit and berry crop by frost. These later reports are in effect that there will be more than an average fruit and berry crop, and that instead of the heavy frosts during May having destroyed these, there was little or no injury done except in a few localities. Cherry trees are loaded with well-developed fruit, apples promise a fair crop, and there will also be fair supplies of grapes, raspberries and blackberries.

State Prison Employes Going to New Fields.

WAUPUN, June 7.—Employes at the State prison, in anticipation of a general clean sweep with the change of administration looked for within a few weeks, are beginning to seek new berths outside. Among the old employes who have already so located are W. B. McDonald, J. J. Hillebert, Asa Holmes, F. W. Moul and G. W. Brown.

Deaf Mute Alumni Association.

The Wisconsin Deaf Mute Alumni association holds its third re-union at the institution at Delavan, June 13-18. The Rev. A. W. Mann, the well known missionary to deaf mutes will be present by invitation. Over 200 members from all parts of the state will be in attendance.

State News in Brief.

Kemper Hall graduating exercises will be held on Thursday, the 11th inst.

Maj.-Gen. Carnahan, of the Uniformed Knights of Pythias, will attend the Ashland encampment.

The woolen mill at Superior will be in operation in less than sixty days. It will employ from 100 to 150 hands.

The cannon captured by the Fourteenth Wisconsin is to be exhibited at Fond du Lac during the ensuing reunion in that city.

Last Friday thirteen vessels were loading iron ore at the Lake Shore Railway docks in Ashland. Most of the mineral is from the Pabst, Norrie and Albany mines.

Twenty per cent. of the stock for a pulp-mill at Mineral Point has been paid in and the work of constructing buildings will be commenced within a couple of weeks.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Waushara County Sunday-School association will be held at the Welsh church, one mile north of Wild Rose, on the 17th and 18th.

The log-drives on most of the streams tributary to the Chippewa river are reported hung up, excepting on the Flambeau and Elk rivers. These will soon be out into the main river.

Hand, one of the three men who are serving life-sentences for the lynching of one Olcson at Blair a year ago, is in the Northern hospital for the insane on commitment by Gov. Peck.

President L. L. Polk of the National Farmer's Alliance, and "Sockless Simpson," of Kansas, are both expected to address the grangers at the big picnic to be held at Janesville on Wednesday.

At a gopher hunt in the town of Trenton, Dodge county, Leslie Armstrong's side made 23,000 points to 11,000 by Johnny Gamble's side. Gophers and rats counted 10, woodchucks, crows, hawks and owls, 50; sparrows, 20, and foxes 100.

A man at Pardeeville drove into a mill-pond with a load of flour to wet his wheels. The bank there is very steep, and, before he knew it, the whole outfit was afloat. The wagon went to the bottom, but the man, team and wagon box got out, very much wet and the man very mad.

The law relating to guide-boards was amended by the last legislature, and it now becomes obligatory for the chairman of each town to cause suitable ones to be erected at the intersection of all the main traveled roads. Failing to do so, after he has been given ten days' notice, subjects him to a fine of $5 for each month that elapses after he has been so notified.

During the recent storm hailstones fell at Rubicon that were two inches in diameter and the pond at Saylesville was covered with a coat of ice two inches in thickness, the floating ice remnining in clusters until late in the evening. Cattle and horses in pastures exposed to the storm ran wild with fear and pain caused by the merciless pelting from the huge cakes of ice which fell fast and furious.

COOKING FOR DYSPEPTICS.

An appetizing and Strengthening Food that Is Highly Recommended.

In a recent newspaper article is given a long list of some one or two hundred different things that a dyspeptic should not eat—all the way from hash to fresh bread. It is easy enough for him to know what he should not eat, especially the second time a dish is set before him. But it is hard for dyspeptics and those troubled with weak digestion to find something that is really palatable and at the same time of benefit.

The eminent Dr. J. Milner Fothergill, whose death has deprived the medical profession of an authority upon dietetics, wrote:

"What is wanted is something which will set easily upon the stomach and at the same time require but a minimum of the digestive act." He gives the following recipe for a dish that is adapted to the weakest stomach. "Upon three tablespoonfuls of Lactated Food moistened with cold water, pour a half pint of hot milk. (If milk is not relished use hot water.) Stir thoroughly and it is ready for use. Season to suit the taste with wine or aromatics."

But we hear some reader ask. "Is not Lactated Food an 'Infant Food?'"

Yes, and is not a dyspeptic's stomach weaker than an infant's? If you have suffered with dyspepsia you will certainly answer, yes, to our question.

This Food that Dr. Fothergill so highly recommends contains all of the life sustaining and strength-giving food elements. It is in every way a perfect food.

Dr. W. H. Sturtevant, M. D., of Pawtucket, R. I., gave Lactated Food a thorough test and writes: "I have found it all that could be desired in nutritive qualities."

Isaac Farrar, M. D., 28 King St., Dorchester, Boston, writes: "I feel warranted in saying that Lactated Food is superior to all other foods in cases of indigestion. It is as valuable for the adult as the infant."

The words of these physicians, some of them world-renowned, should carry the weight they deserve. Their experience with Lactated Food is most gratifying, but they are not alone, for the manufacturers of this Food have upon file thousands of similar letters testifying to the health-restoring and strength-giving power of this delicious food in all dyspeptic and debilitated conditions.

DEATH AND IMMORTALITY.

Letter of Archdeacon Farrar to the Daughter of Charles Bradlaugh.

Pall Mall Gazette: Archdeacon Farrar has adressed the following letter to Mrs. Hypatia Bradlaugh Bonner in reply to a communication which she had addressed him:

Dear Madam: I do not know a single reasonably educated Christian who takes the mere symbols of heaven for heaven. We do not suppose that heaven is a cubic city, or a pagoda of jewels, or even an endless seven-fold chorus of hallelujahs and harping symphonies. Long ago a Christian poet sang:—

"Oh, for a deeper insight into heaven;
More knowledge of the glory and the joy
Which there unto the happy souls is given;
For it is past belief that Christ hath died
Only that we eternal psalms might sing.
That all the gain Death's awful curtains hide
Is this eternity of nuthcming.
And this praised rest: shall there be no endeavor?" etc., etc.

If I could find a printed sermon of mine entitled "What Heaven is," you would see that we regard it as a place of progress, of fruition of all that is noble, of growth and progress upwards and onwards, of endless and beneficent activity, of a love which knows no fear and no hatred, of a growing more like to God because we shall see Him as He is. In Browning's poems you will see this view of heaven constantly set forth; and the eminent theologian Whichcot said, two centuries ago, "Heaven is a temper." I have often quoted with approval the saying of Confucius, "Heaven means principle."

The old detestable notions of happy souls rejoicing over the torments of the lost have long been exorcised, and if you have time to glance at my "Eternal Hope," or "Mercy and Judgment," which now represent the best opinions in the Church, you will see many proofs that the Calvinistic horrors of an unnatural theology have been never authorized by many men, even by the greatest Christian Fathers and canonized saints of the Mediæval Church.

Let me add, I for one have not uttered a syllable of disrespect about your father, though I am a sincere and convinced believer. I only met him once, as chaplain of the House of Commons, and we exchanged a courteous greeting. Had I been able to show him Christianity as I see it, I do not think he would have wished to be counted among the foes of our Gospel—if such was his attitude. But Christianity has been more sorely wounded in the house of its friends than by its enemies

Yours faithfully, F. W. FARRAR.

Rather Rough on Culture.

Social Economist: We are not here contending that a man of culture is not pleasanter to look upon than a toilsome mechanic, and that he has not a wider horizon, for that contention would be false. He is as much more beautiful to observe as is the house of Vanderbilt than a clothing shop, or a shoe factory. And he is in a way a finer citizen just as a yacht is a finer boat than a freight steamer, or a tally-ho is finer than a McCormick's mower and reaper. But when it comes to helping and moulding society, to making the future world, to uplifting men, he is comparltively not important at all. He and his questions and his knowledge and his habits of mind, excepting in the case of men of genius—who trained or untrained are a class by themselves,—furnish next to nothing to the great forward movement of the age, the movement of the masses to a higher plane of life. Usually he is found in the way of that movement, reprobating all that mechanics and employers who are conducting the campaign devise for its amelioration. He stands prattling like McVane at Harvard, or aloof and critical like Sumner at Yale, or amiably talking on both sides like Ely at John Hopkins, or fussily meddling like Wilde and Morris advising that helpless imbecility of socialism,—the last craze of dreamer and theorist, very much as Rousseau and Diderot advised the rights-of-man theory to the French Revolutionists; but he furnishes no economic and actual solution to real difficulties, solutions at once sound and workable and rational.

The Effect Was Magical.

I suffered from cancer on my lip that defied the skill of the best physicians of the State. I had it burned out, but the operation only made it worse, causing it to spread over more surface and eat deeper in. I finally used Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) to heal it up and drove the poison out of my blood. The effect of the Specific was magical! It healed up entirely without leaving a scar as a reminder. This was over four years ago, and since then there has been no sign of a return of the cancer. I will cheerfully answer any inquiries in regard to my case.

GUATEMALA AT PEACE.

The Internal Difficulties Settled and the Republic Solidly Established.

Washington Post: "The internal difficulties of Guatemala are settled," said Senor Batres, the Guatemalan minister, to a Post reporter at the Arlington, "and believing that the republic is solidly established we hope to knit more closely, by means of a reciprocity treaty, the already intimate political and commercial relations between my country and the United States. Of course, I have done nothing in this line as yet, as I have not even been presented to the president. There is quite an American colony in Guatemala, while your minister there, Mr. Pochero, is most popular. He speaks Spanish with perfect accent and fluency, and is a delightful host. His daughter has married a Guatemalan gentleman who is worth $10,000,000.

"Guatemala needs laborers. We are doing everything to invite immigration, even to the extent of giving the new comers small grants of land. We could cultivate more coffee if we only had the laborers to gather the crops. As it is, a portion of the crop always goes to waste because there are not men enough to gather it. Laborers receive from 60 to 75 cents a day, but this is equivalent to a much larger sum in the United States; for instance, there is no expense for fuel, and one suit of clothes is seasonable all the year around.

"Is there money in growing coffee? Yes, it pays. The whole expense of growing 100 pounds of coffee is $8, and you can sell that quantity in this country and Europe for $20 or $22, so you see there is a good margin of profit. Our climate is so diversified from the tropic weather of the coast to the temperate zone of the plateaus and the Arctic snows of the mountain tops, that we can grow everything from cocoa to potatoes. The climate, too, will suit everybody. Our resources are constantly being developed. We have lots of lumber, but no manufactures. They are slowly being introduced. At present, however, we import ready-made houses in sections from Chicago and San Francisco."

BIG HEARTED AND BRAVE.

Yet the Officers of Our Army and Navy Are Poorly Paid.

New York Herald: The American people are hardly aware of the sacrifices which fall to the lot of officers in the navy and regular army. They are an exceptionally clear headed, big hearted and administrative class of men, ready at all times to face danger and cheerfully placing their lives in peril to defend the honor of their country.

But their salaries are pitiably small, their personal expenses are large and promotion is inconceivably slow. They receive smaller pay than a confidential clerk or a first-class newspaper reporter for duties which involve great responsibility and the proper execution of which demands a superior order of talent. They are always compelled to appear in suitable uniform, and must needs have in addition such civilian garments as the proprieties of the occasion demand. The esprit du corps furthermore requires them to entertain visiting strangers and foreign officials in a manner which will reflect credit on the government but the government furnishes them no allowance to meet these necessary hospitalities. The expense of such courtesies comes out of their own pockets.

As an illustration, we may cite the case of Lieut. Caziac, who has just been made a captain of artillery. During the war he served on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Canby and under other officers of high rank. When the rebellion ended he took the commission of second lieutenant in the regular army, and during the last twenty-six years occupied positions of trust. Now, after the lapse of so long a time, he is promoted to a captaincy.

This is only one instance in hundreds. We simply call attention to it that we may have opportunity to emphasize the general obligation which we are under to the officers in the navy and the army. They make no complaints, but, on the contrary, are the most cheerful as well as the poorest paid men, considering the value of their services, in the country. They should not only be held in high esteem by the people, but have a larger salary. There is no reason why the man who stands to his guns and is always ready to do a hazardous duty, of which we can reap the benefit, should be either underpaid or underappreciated.
